Re: In Support of S.B. 4

Greetings Chairman Bacon, Vice Chair Dolan, Ranking Member Thomas, and members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. I urge you to support S.B. 4 so that survivors of sex trafficking are empowered with meaningful opportunities to achieve recovery, gainful employment, stable housing, and community reintegration.

I submit this testimony on behalf of the Ohio Justice & Policy Center, a nonprofit law firm whose mission is to promote fair, intelligent, and redemptive criminal justice systems. OJPC has represented multiple victims of human trafficking in filing successful expungement applications under R.C. 2953.38 (Safe Harbor expungement). OJPC also conducts trainings statewide about expungement for trafficking-survivors.

FOUNDER

ALPHONSE GERHARDSTEIN

BACKGROUND

Human trafficking in Ohio is a fast growing and highly underreported form of modern day slavery. Victims – usually women and children – are compelled to commit crimes, like prostitution, theft, and drug-sales, for traffickers' financial gain. The trauma and abuse they suffer is horrific. When survivors break free, their criminal records create serious barriers to employment, housing, education, family reunification, and more. In 2012, the Ohio Legislature created a new expungement process (Safe Harbor Act, H.B. 262) to reverse the damage created by arresting victims of sex trafficking. The law allows survivors to erase conviction records resulting from the trafficking situation.¹

SOLVING TWO PROBLEMS

While the 2012 expungement provision aimed to remove criminal-records-based barriers for survivors, S.B. 4 is necessary to truly achieve this goal. Based on OJPC's experience filing Safe Harbor expungements and our conversations with advocates statewide, there remain two significant problems in the law, which are solved by S.B. 4.

First, survivors should be able to apply to expunge any criminal convictions where the person’s participation was a result of being a victim of human trafficking. The current language of R.C. 2953.38 is ambiguous, so some courts and prosecutors may think that expungement is available only for convictions of prostitution, loitering to solicit, and solicitation. In reality, after being subjected to tremendous abuse (e.g., rape, forced heroin use), victims have criminal records far exceeding these three charges. For example, traffickers exploit their victims to transport drugs, participate in “public indecency”, steal items for resale, and hide from police. If only a few offenses can be expunged, survivors are left with dozens of records that create the very barriers that the Safe Harbor law was meant to erase. S.B. 4 remedies this ambiguity.²

Second, survivors need to expunge records of arrest that did not lead to conviction. Under the current R.C. 2953.38, survivors of sex trafficking can erase convictions but cannot erase other case records. The non-convictions continue to appear on background checks, online clerk-of-courts sites, etc. Survivors have to take a separate action to seal these records – and even then, the records stay with the court and are accessible in the future (in limited situations). It is necessary for non-convictions to also be expunged to fully realize the purpose of the original Safe Harbor Act.

CONCLUSION

S.B. 4 presents a simple and convenient remedy for two problems in the expungement law. Essentially, S.B. 4 empowers trafficking survivors to remove the shackles forged by their traffickers – truly eliminating the criminal records that resulted from the trafficking situation. The bill clears up any past ambiguities and creates one of the strongest forms of redemption that has ever existed for survivors of sex trafficking in Ohio. OJPC urges each of you to vote for S.B. 4.

² This bill allows survivors to apply for expungement of any convictions that resulted from trafficking, except aggravated murder, murder, and rape. This exclusion parallels the other “true expungement” in Ohio law – namely juvenile record expungement. While OJPC believes that all offenses should be expungable, we support the bill with this limited exception.
