

Good Afternoon

I would love the opportunity to voice my opinion and views on EdChoice. We currently reside in a district with a newly "unperforming" elementary school (Whitehouse Primary). My daughter's reading and math scores have dropped dramatically since moving into the district this year. I do believe that my children should have the opportunity to attend a school of our choosing to further their education and that it is our right as working tax paying parents to take advantage of that opportunity. We are a middle income family, just above all the "poverty" guidelines but not high enough above to afford 100% tuition and not far enough below to qualify for any assistance. We are a 2-parent working household. I work in the medical field and my husband is a government employee (firefighter/paramedic/fire inspector) My children matter too! Please let our voices be heard.
