Senator Obhof took the chair and addressed the Senate.

As we approach the end of this first session of the 133rd General Assembly, it is customary for the President of the Senate to exercise the president's prerogative to make a few remarks. Before I do that, I am going to invite up my friend, Minority Leader Kenny Yuko, for some brief remarks as well.

The Senate is a family ... we respect each other ... we work well together ... and when we disagree, we are professional about it.

Leader Yuko, thank you for your service ... for being a partner of mine ... and for being such a strong advocate for the positions and viewpoints of the members of the minority caucus.

Senator Yuko addressed the Senate from the chair.

Ladies and gentlemen, we now begin the next chapter of this great institution. I want to thank all those who made this occasion possible.

To Pastor Robert Kurtz of Mansfield Baptist Temple, thank you for delivering the invocation today. Thank you as well to Pastor Brian Hanson of the Grace Baptist Church in Cedarville for joining us today. We ask for your continued prayers, not only for the public servants here today, but for the nearly 12 million people that we serve.

Our thanks as well goes to the Reverend Thomas Wise from Valley View Church in Dayton, who is here today – as he often is – to provide advice and counsel to members of the legislature.

To Justice Judy French and Justice Melody Stewart, thank you for administering the oaths of office to those who are beginning new terms, or those who are taking on positions in leadership.

And my special thanks goes to the Ohio Air National Guard, 179th Airlift Wing Color Guard for delivering the colors today, as you did in the last

General Assembly as well. It is an honor to represent you, and I could not be more proud about the fact that the great men and women of the 179th are part of the 22nd Senate District. On behalf of the people of Ohio, thank you, and thank you to all members of the armed forces, for everything that you do every day to keep us safe, protect our freedoms, and assist with disaster relief efforts here and around the globe.

I'd also like to thank law enforcement, and particularly the Highway Patrol – we see them around the Statehouse, and there are some patrolmen and women here today. All our men and women in uniform deserve our respect. And Jay MacDonald is here on behalf of the Fraternal Order of Police today, but really, on behalf of all law enforcement and other first responders across the state.

So let's have a round of applause for all of our first responders. Thank you for what you do ... for the sacrifices that you make and the risks that you take to keep us safe, to protect our families. The Ohio Senate, and the people of Ohio, appreciate you.

And I offer thanks as well to the children and grandchildren of Senate members for leading us today in the Pledge of Allegiance. To the members of the Ashland University Chamber Singers, thank you for joining us today as well.

We are joined by several prior leaders, including a number of my predecessors as Senate President. Presidents Aranoff, Finan, White, Niehaus and Faber, thank you for being here today, and for helping lay the foundation that we will build on during this General Assembly.

I also want to recognize the Senate and Statehouse employees who work tirelessly behind the scenes. Whether it is the Senate staff who do so much of the heavy lifting around here .... Or our friends at the Legislative Service Commission who provide invaluable, non-partisan help drafting laws or providing analysis ... or the staff of the Capital Square Review and Advisory Board who maintain one of the finest Statehouses anywhere in the country day in and day out .... YOU make this day possible.

More importantly, though, is your work every other day -- not just on opening day when we are showing off to the State and to our families, but on random Tuesday evenings when we need your help .... on a Wednesday afternoon when nobody is watching ... sometimes on a holiday or over a weekend because the budget process doesn't stop for the nuances of our calendar.

You keep things running and you help each of us serve our constituents. We wouldn't be able to do our jobs without all of you doing your jobs so well. And while your efforts are not always publicly acknowledged, I can assure you they're always recognized and always appreciated.

My greatest thanks goes to the family and friends who are here alongside us, not just for this occasion, but for every day. I know that you make a lot of sacrifices. For the adults, time away from your spouses, dealing with difficult and sometimes unpredictable schedules. For the kids who are here today, I know the sacrifice that it means for you .... time away from your moms and dads, because they are here in Columbus. Please know that they are working for you, so that you and your friends can grow up in an Ohio that has opportunity, that provides the best education possible, that gives you a State that you can be proud of and where you can raise your own families someday.

I know that being the wife or husband or child of a legislator isn't easy. The honor bestowed upon each of us in this chamber comes with sacrifices. And that means that members miss out on quite a bit of the everyday family life that they would otherwise experience. That is why we're particularly grateful for the understanding and patience of our family and friends. Without you none of us would be here today.

We meet here today, as we do every two years at this moment, to kick off a new General Assembly. And as I did two years ago, I would like to remind everyone here that we each swore an oath today.

We swore to faithfully discharge our duties and to uphold the Constitution. We did not swear to a political party, to an interest group, or to any personal agenda.

We work for the people of this State -- the people who have given us the awesome task of representing them in these hallowed halls. Not special interests, and not yourself. No campaign contribution or endorsement is worth sacrificing your integrity.

We are here for the people that we represent -- for each of us, roughly 350,000 people back home, and 11.7 million total people across the state. Some of those people voted for you, some of them voted for me, some of them didn't. But it is our responsibility to represent all of them to the best of our abilities. It is our responsibility to be the voices for the people of our districts ... all people, especially those whose voices are not loud enough to be heard on their own.

And sometimes we will disagree about how to best move the state forward. But if you keep an open door to your constituents, and an open ear to their concerns, more often than not, you'll be on the right track.

So remember your vows today: to faithfully perform your duties, to serve the people of Ohio with no other allegiance than to the Constitution and our Creator.

I thank you for the opportunity to continue serving the Senate as its leader for the 133rd General Assembly. There can be little doubt that this Chamber has been the one constant over the past few years .... a stabilizing force in choppy waters. And we did some great work in the last General Assembly.... Balancing a difficult budget, cutting taxes for the working poor, helping victims of human trafficking, reforming our sentencing laws, getting red tape and regulation out of the way and setting the stage for a pro-growth economy that led to more new jobs in 2018 than any year in the last two decades.

These are the results that matter for the people of Ohio. So don't measure your success by how many amendments you can squeeze into a bill, or by how many of those bills are signed by the Governor. Measure it instead by asking yourself, "Are the people I represent better off today than they were yesterday? Are they more free? Do they have more opportunities? Am I doing a job that my mom would be proud of ... that my children can brag to their children about one day." That's why we are here. And every night you should be able to answer those questions the right way.

It is an honor to lead the Senate, but I and the other members of leadership never forget that we serve the other members ... and your constituents as well. We are grateful for the confidence you have shown in us, as we work together to make a great state even better for the next generation – for our children and for our grandchildren.

Never forget what a privilege it is to be here today. Out of 11.7 million people in Ohio, there are only 33 members of this body. That is a tremendous responsibility for each of us.

This chamber has produced three United States Presidents, a Chief Justice of our nation's highest court, numerous governors, and other state and federal officials. Our nation's most respected leaders have walked through these halls, from Abraham Lincoln to Teddy Roosevelt. And you and I have the honor of continuing that great legacy.

How can we do that? The Book of Micah tells us to act justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God. Philippians tells us to govern in humility, valuing others above ourselves. And in the Book of Luke, Jesus Christ gave the clearest commandment of all: "do to others as you would have them do to you." That applies every bit as much to your relationship with your constituents as it does to your interactions with your neighbor or with your colleagues.

So let's work to improve the lives of the people we represent. Let's work to provide economic opportunity and to advance the cause of individual liberty. And as we seek to do justice, remember who you serve.

While we have great responsibility, we have it only for a short time. During that time, stay in contact with your constituents, focus on your districts, and spend most of your time there. Talk to people, but more importantly, listen to them.

Remember your faith and your family and the values that they instill in you. And remember the reasons that you are here: because hundreds of thousands of your friends and neighbors sent you here to represent them.

I think if you take a look back at the last eight years that I've spent in the legislature, two things really stick out. First, we have a lot of hard-working people, who are focused on the right things, who did a lot of work to turn the state around. Second, contrary to most peoples' perceptions of how things operate in politics, we actually work very well together.

We aren't always going to see eye to eye. We'll often have different ways of trying to achieve the same goals. Sometimes, although not nearly as often as one might expect, we may even have different goals. But in the last General Assembly, and the one before, we had bipartisan support for more than 90 percent of the bills that passed this chamber.

We can have different views, we can have differences of opinion, we can have different policy goals. But we can also be civil. And I think that here in the Senate, we treat each other with mutual respect. We will treat our constituents with respect. We will treat our staff and anyone else we encounter with respect. And I look forward to continuing that over the next two years.

I just want to say that it has been an honor to be up here today. I want to thank everybody for giving me the opportunity to lead the Senate for the next two years, and I look forward to working with all of you as we push Ohio forward.
