Detailed Fiscal Analysis

Current law requires that 55% of those voting in a special election vote in favor of certain property tax levies for the levy to pass. Under this bill, only a simple majority is needed to pass these levies during a special election. This bill may make it easier to pass certain property tax levies. Certain political subdivisions may see an increase in revenues as levies that may not pass under the supermajority may pass with a simple majority of voters.

Under existing law, the following political subdivisions are not subject to the supermajority restriction: school districts and levies that supplement the general fund for the purposes of public assistance, human or social services, relief, welfare, hospitalization, health, or the support of general or tuberculosis hospitals.
