To whom it may concern,

5/20/2019

It has come to my attention that the Revolving Loan Plan for helping students attend private dental assisting schools in the State Of Ohio has been the target of our government. If this money is transferred to other areas of government, I feel that many potential students will be denied the opportunity to better themselves and the dental community.

There is a population of students that do not have the financial resources to attend without some supplementation of income. There is a great need in the dental community for smart and confident dental assistants. Our profession will suffer by missing out of this subset of students who will not be able to attend schools such as "Assist to Succeed" and "First Impressions" dental assisting schools here in Columbus, Ohio.

I myself came from a blue collar family that did not have the finances to send me to post high school higher education. I was the first ever in my family to break out of the low income cycle. If not for the financial help from the government I would not be Beth A. Love DDS today. I feel very strongly that it would be a mistake to take this money from these students. They are trying desperately to better themselves and their families. In my dealings with students trained at these institutions, they are well trained and ready to work hard and continue being productive members of our society. Please reconsider the value of the Revolving Loan Plan Program. Dentistry needs these students to better serve our society. The profession will be missing out of many potential assistants that will not be able to afford this education.

Sincerely,

Beth A. Love DDS
