

My now 85 year old mom with dementia is in an assisted living facility. She was quarantined to her small room. She is lonely and has declined. These residents are the loneliest and need the most love. This is inhumane what you are doing to these residents (my mom). Every time I take her out for a doctor's appointment, it is an automatic 2 weeks in quarantine. She has no table to eat at in her room, no activities, no hair done. Could you be in your 20x16 room for 14 days? You are punishing them for getting health care. Let us in! Let us hold their hand, to love them, and let them know we are still there for them. Residents need exercise to keep healthy and boost the immune system. They need love, hugs and their family the most. They are in these homes for a reason. Quality not quantity. This is what they want. Just ask them.
