Background

I am the youngest of 6 children. My father was a high school principal, assistant superintendent, and college professor. My mother worked as a school psychologist. I am the only one of their children that followed in their footsteps, becoming an educator.

My parents raised us in Yellow Springs, Ohio. At the time it was a very diverse community that valued education. My parents, especially my father, believed in diversity. He made sure we understood that people are not defined by the color of their skin or their financial means. My parents were the first in their family to graduate from college and made sure all of their children did as well. My career has been spent helping students get the best education they can, learn social skills, empathy and self-esteem along the way.
