

I am strongly against shortening the time to accept legally submitted ballots. Once a ballot is legally submitted and postmarked by the legal date of election, the delivery is completely dependent on the United States Postal Service. Any delay by the United States Postal Service should not be allowed to disenfranchise a citizen and invalidate their legal ballot. The only reason to shorten the time allotted for the United States Postal Service to deliver legally submitted ballots is to negate legal ballots and impede the rights of citizens to cast legal ballots.
