

This bill is dangerous in that it limits colleges from teaching subjects that may be uncomfortable-but true. We cannot become a great nation by hiding our mistakes rather than learning from them, and this will make some people uncomfortable. But, young adults go to college to expand their minds to greatness, so they should expect some discomfort. Additionally, I strongly oppose the removal of DEI initiatives. Not everybody is as lucky as I am to be born healthy, wealthy and with a supportive family. We would miss out on elevating the great minds of people who don't fit the "traditional" image of a college student. I learned this lesson from an econ professor at the Naval Postgraduate School who taught my 2nd level MBA Econ class that the US Navy finds its strength in diversity. Finally, I strongly oppose any limitation on collective bargaining. This is a basic human right, and a freedom that all Americans should be entitled to enjoy. It is a basic protection for ordinary Americans, and the right to assemble, organize and protect yourself at work should not be outlawed.
