The bill makes several changes to the Ohio utilities protection service law. It eliminates the option for utility operators to participate on a limited basis and requires full participation in the state's protection service, including use of its positive response system. It also revises the definition of "excavation" to exempt certain activities when performed in a public right-of-way, such as milling road surfaces, utility pole inspections, tilling for sowing of grass, and placing temporary signage. Lastly, it adjusts the required timeframe for notifying the protection service before excavation to a window between two working days and 16 calendar days in advance and clarifies the definition of a "working day."

The bill does not have any direct fiscal effect on the state or political subdivisions.
