

Tim Schaffer
20th District

Ohio Senate
Senate Building
Room 128, First Floor
Columbus, Ohio 43215
(614) 466-8076
sd20@ohiosenate.gov

Committees:
Agriculture & Natural Resources, Chair
Government Oversight and Reform
Insurance
Transportation

Senate Veterans and Public Safety Committee
Senate Bill 59 — Sponsor Testimony
Tuesday February 16, 2021

Chairman Hoagland, Vice Chair Johnson, Ranking Member Thomas, and members of the Senate Veterans and Public Safety Committee, thank you for the opportunity to present sponsor testimony on Senate Bill 59.

In my district we have a truly historic war relic. In fact, it is a crown jewel of Lancaster—an authentic Civil War cannon used by Ohio native General William Tecumseh Sherman during the Battle of Shiloh and his famed March to the Sea through the South.

Like the Sherman cannon, Ohio is blessed to have numerous pieces of history on display throughout our great state. Stretching back to the Revolutionary Era, the War of 1812, the Civil War, the wars of the 20th Century to our current conflicts in the Middle East, these pieces of history remind us of the sacrifices brave men and women made in the name of freedom and liberty. They let us pause so we can remember how high the cost truly is to preserve the rights and privileges we enjoy as Americans.

These relics carry another high price as well—the amounts that unscrupulous private dealers and collectors will pay to hide them away from public view forever. It is far from uncommon for collectors to approach cash-strapped local governments or cemetery associations and offer them what seems like a sizable amount of money for their historic cannons. For some of these organizations, it can be an offer too good to pass up. They can erase a deficit by liquidating one of their assets, which may appear on the surface to be a reasonable financial strategy to pursue.

However, there are flaws to that decision to sell a piece of history.

First of all, cannons, artillery and their equipment are still property of the federal government, making the transaction an illegal sale.

Second, these war relics have a value to society that no private collector can match, a reminder to future generations of what it has taken to preserve our freedoms. Allowing that reminder to be forever lost to a private collection or melted down as scrap is a detriment to the public as a whole and a stain on the memory of those who served and sacrificed.

Senate Bill 59 will provide the necessary protections these war relics deserve. Here is what I propose in the bill:

- It would prohibit a war relic located on public property or on the property of a public cemetery association from being sold, destroyed, relocated, removed, altered or otherwise disturbed by any person. Should someone violate this, they would be given a 90 day right to cure period, followed by a $10,000 fine if not cured within that timeframe.
- Exceptions include:
  - If the war relic is returned to the federal government.
  - If repair work is being done.

- If it is being placed on a temporary display or if it is being used for re-enactment purposes.
- The bill does provide exemptions for the state and political subdivisions, but only if they can clearly prove their ownership of the war relic in writing.
- The legislation also targets purchasers of these war relics by levying a $10,000 fine against them. This is a significant financial disincentive, but it also serves to target their reputation as well. No reasonable collector will engage in this activity with the threat of this fine being attached to their name.
  - No local government suffers any fine or penalty under this bill.

In closing, it is time that the state adopt legislation to protect these invaluable pieces of history from disappearing from public view forever—or worse, being melted down for scrap. We owe it to the memories of the men and women who served to establish and then preserve our freedoms.

We owe it to our children and grandchildren to preserve the artifacts they will one day experience for themselves.

Last General Assembly, this legislation was supported by Ohio History Connection, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, Sons of Veterans Reserve, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, the Society of the War of 1812, and Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

Thank you Chairman Hoagland and members of the committee for the opportunity to bring this bill before you today. I would be glad to answer any questions you may have.